Using modern communication tools & storytelling to make better decisions

HR professionals make dozens of decisions every day and most of them are shaped by stories they never chose to tell. In this keynote, Apostolos challenges the way we listen, interpret, and act on human information at work, and offers a fresh, practical lens for turning everyday communication into smarter, more empathetic decision-making. Through real scenarios, honest provocation, and immediately applicable thinking tools, because the most powerful shift in HR doesn't start with a new system. It starts with a new, different, and thought-changing question.

12:20 – 13:00 | Speaker: Mr Dennis Normark

Topic: Pseudo Work – how did we end up being busy doing nothing?

Never before in history, have we had so much “streamlining”, efficiency” and “digitalization” with a promise of releasing more time for the core task - and never before have we spent more time on unnecessary things than now. At least according to Dennis Normark who in 2018 published the book "Pseudo Work - how ended up being busy, doing nothing" that has become an international bestseller. His talk is a provocative and eye-opening insight into the tasks we waste each other's time with, and the simple changes employees, managers and HR-professionals can implement to pull the rug away under administrative redundancy and delusions about what is actually important. We are all busy, but what are we really busy with? With his talk Normark provides a sharper and more honest perspective on productivity and a roadmap to creating workdays that actually matter.
